

The Politics of Egypt's Natural Gas

Prospects and Power Uncovered

Energy is a heavily politicised industry in most resource rich countries, with the potential revenues giving governments added leverage when it comes to guaranteeing political stability. In Egypt, the natural gas sector has all the ingredients needed to be profitable but this depends on the approach taken by the power players in Cairo. With a privatisation programme of downstream assets on the horizon, power plays over gas related affairs will register on the radar of private investors. As such, the political risks have never been greater nor the opportunities as lucrative.

This report includes various graphics, such as EGPC & EGAS Shareholding structure, Corporate Influence and Ownership in the Gas sector, and Energy Sector Power Players.
